THE COACHING STAFF

The University of Idaho has a well balanced coaching staff with years of experience both as players and in the instruction side. With the exception of Freshman Coach Art Smith, all have played professional football. Dr. Jacobson, team trainer, has also been a coach so he understands both the player and the coach's point of view. Both Coach Smith and Coach Herschel Ramsey are new to the staff this season. During the playing season the staff is usually divided up with Coaches Harlow and Ramsey doing the scouting while Coach Curfman assists Head Coach Howell in handling the ball game on Saturday.

High Scoring Vandal Veterans To Meet Single-Wing Offensive For First Time

By KEN HUNTER
Athletic Publicity Director
University of Idaho

WHEN the Idaho Vandals move to Pullman for today's game they will be meeting a single wing type of offensive for the first time this season. How well they will be prepared to stem the deceptive thrusts of this type of attack will be told before the day is over. Oddly enough Idaho's net four opponents will all be single wing teams. These include Oregon State, Wyoming, Arizona State at Tempe and Boston university.

Vandall Platoons

The Vandals, unable to turn tide against Washington State for many years, will be a similar team to the Cougars. The Vandals lost 16 men from last year's team and must rely heavily on sophomore reserves after the veterans tire. Against Oregon, Coach Dixie Howell used the platoon system for the first time. That is he used a defensive team of 10 men and offensive team of 10. The eleventh man on both teams was Left Halfback Johnny Brogan of Coeur-d'Alene. Howell has not indicated any change in this detail for Washington State.

To date the Vandals have lost to Montana 28 to 27 and to Texas Western 43 to 33, but have notched up wins over Utah 26 to 19 and over Oregon 14 to 0. They have been a high scoring team but not too sharp defensively, at least until the Oregon encounter.

For the Vandals to go into the platoon system required great risk and quite a gamble. In as thin a squad as the Vandals an injury or two might upset all the apple cart.

Men to Watch

Men you might like to pay particular attention to here today on the Vandal squad are not too numerous, but several will bear watching.

In the line at guard, No. 23, is Roy Colquitt. Last year as a junior Colquitt was named to the first all-coast squad and is an improved player this fall with the added experience. Off the field Colquitt is slow and lazy but on the turf he moves with the best of them.

John Brogan has borne the brunt of Idaho's offensive load for the past two years. He throws, kicks and runs as well as does his share of the blocking. He wears No. 5 and you'll see him at the safety spot on defense most of this afternoon.

The fastest man on the squad runs at the right halfback spot, No. 63, Glen Christian, a stocky 185-pound junior. Christian is still learning but is improving with every outing. He still has much to learn about defense but can twist and run with the best of them.

The offensive fullback, King Block, No. 4, is another stocky-built 189 pounder with quick starting speed and the ability to run either the ends or through the middle. His specialty is the quick opening thrusts in the line.

A sophomore end, No. 6, Jerry Ogle, might startle you with his pass-catching ability. You will have to watch and see.

Intercollegiate Football's Challenge

FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION

In some sections of the country, football has had a strain thrown on it by the indiscriminate use of intoxicants by fans at the games. In most instances, this has been by a small percentage who have been inconsiderate of other people's rights.

On our campus, this abuse has been at a minimum, but we are asking your wholehearted cooperation in discouraging such action at our games. There is no place for liquor on the Washington State Campus, of which the stadium is a part.

Each of you is entitled to every privilege and consideration. We have endeavored to give you the finest program possible. Football is America's leading intercollegiate sport and characterizes the finest spirit in competition. Let us help keep it clean through our moral obligation to the sport and to others.

So You Want To Sit On The Fifty

By HORATIO CRUSHBLOWER

WHAT was the ruination of Rome? Most historians will tell you it was brought about by the dissipation and soft living of the early Romans.

Crushblower's Athletic Handbook brings out a long forgotten historical fact, "the decline of the Roman empire," the book reads, "was brought about by the utter confusion created when 50,000 Romans decended upon the Coliseum's ticket manager demanding fifty yard line seats to a battle between Nick O'Popodopolis and Georgeous Smith, a shipwrecked Mohawk Indian."

To this day College engineers still haven't figured out how they can design a University stadium with all the seats on the fifty yard line.

Heading the "headache department" of a college athletic office is the man called the Ticket Manager. He's the fellow who handles the football tickets once they're printed and ready for distribution. On the shoulders of this modern day Houdini rest many grave problems.

From the University of Maine to Coos Bay high school, fifty yard seats are the most sought after of all ducats. At Washington State College a quiet mannered gentleman by the name of Glenn Oman holds the unique title of Ticket Manager. Across the desk of this 31 year old Cougar grad comes the stories of "any where in the stadium ole pal, just as long as it's on the fifty."

Thousands of letters, phone calls and wires pour into the ticket department. Mixed in with the many requests are demands for seats on the fifty yard line. "Not anyplace else just the fifty," reads many a letter. If the request is one of the first ones in the chances are the individual will end up with an excellent seat. Actually Washington State College has no seats on the fifty. The fifty yard line divides 45 rows on the south side and 24 on the student side.

For the most part few colleges will take checks for tickets too early. A letter written early enough in the Spring will assure you of getting in line for the "best seats." As each month passes, and the football season draws near, the chances of getting a seat, "near the fifty yard line, and high enough up to see the mole on cousin Henry's neck" gets slimmer. Football tickets are like bon bons at a kids party, the good ones go first.

At Washington State College there are no fifty yard line seats, you either sit on the 49 yard line or lower. According to Glenn Oman, ticket manager extraordinary, there are over 1200 seats between the 40 and 50 yard lines. These seats are put on sale only after the home team, coaching staff, alumni groups, those early birds we were talking about and press and radio are taken care of. Usually those writing in early enough never have anything to worry about.

At Texas Western College the seats most sought after are the end zone seats. According to their publicist, Wallace Snelson, the alumni and boosters roar the loudest when they don't get the end zone. Here at Washington State people actually write in requesting seats on the five yard line or lower. As one alum put it, "I'm bound to see plenty of action at least fifty percent of the time."

Biggest headache to any ticket manager is the request for "anything near the fifty," about two weeks before the big game. The chances of getting a fifty yard line seat a week before the Hoedunker College-Hackamore Academy contest are just as good. Few games are ever so poor in ticket sales that the middle of the bleachers or grandstand aren't sold out three months prior to game.

With some 25,000 seats being sold in the Cougar stadium at Roger's field, not one ticket is put on sale that has a limited view, by that we mean, no posts, steel beams or stair chutes. All bad tickets are removed from sale long before people are thinking about fall football.

But those fifty yard tickets they just don't exist.

Forest Evashevski

Former Michigan Grid Star Brings Great Record and Single-Wing Attack to WSC

FOREST EVASHEVSKI, head football coach at Washington State College, is considered by many sports authorities the nation over as the "greatest blocking back in intercollegiate football."

The former Michigan great and team captain, Evashevski was "Mr. Steam Roller" for All-American Tom Harmon on the famous University of Michigan single wing offense.

Evashevski graduated from Detroit's Northwestern High School in 1936. Despite the fact that Evashevski became a great football player at Michigan, he played only two games in prep circles, both his senior year. Until his senior year in high school Evashevski weighed only 140 pounds. When a senior Evashevski topped the scales at a healthy 180 pounds.

The football career of Forest Evashevski might have ended his senior year in high school if it weren't for his strong determination. Evashevski suffered a cerebral hemorrhage his second time on the prep gridiron. Doctors warned him to give up the game or risk endangering his life.

Intercollegiate football and an opportunity to attend college attracted Evashevski to the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor in the fall of 1937. From his first day at Michigan in '37 until his final graduation day in 1941 young Forest Evashevski grew with the fame of intercollegiate football. Sports writers and broadcasters still remember "Evy" as the Ann Arbor institution's "one man gang," being blocker and quarterback for the 1938, '39 and '40 University of Michigan varsity squads.

Following his graduation from the University of Michigan, where he majored in sociology and psychology, Evashevski took to the coaching profession. His first position was head coach at little Hamilton College in Clinton, N. Y. Hamilton College wasn't destined to hold the young mentor long and in the spring of 1942 he joined the coaching staff of the University of Pittsburgh as backfield coach. Later that year he entered the United States Navy.

"Evy" saw almost four years with the Navy and he was discharged with the rank of lieutenant in 1946.

Clarence L. "Biggie" Munn had heard quite a bit about Evashevski and in 1946 "Evy" put aside his Navy uniform to join "Biggie" at Syracuse University. In addition to holding the head backfield coaching spot, Evashevski was head baseball coach.

When the Michigan State College officials invited "Biggie" Munn to take over the head coaching chores at the East Lansing institution he was invited to bring Forest Evashevski along. In December of 1946 Evashevski was back in the state of Michigan, only this time as head backfield coach of the Michigan State Spartans.

While at Michigan State, Forest Evashevski gained national recognition for the hard playing backs he coached. In 1947 his men gained 2120 yards carrying the ball from scrimmage. In 1948 Michigan State ranked in the nation's first five grid clubs in yards gained via the ground route with 3301; 1949 found the Spartan backs hauling the pigskin 2319 yards to again place them high in national statistics.

Washington State College officials had heard of Forest Evashevski's ability. When the head coaching position at WSC was vacated with the resignation of Phil Sarboe, "Evy" was recommended highly to Cougarville officials.

In late January of 1950 Forest Evashevski was appointed head football coach at Washington State College.

To date, "Evy's" Cougars have won two games, lost one and tied one during the 1950 season. This game will mark the first Idaho contest for the new Cougar coach.

Hobbs has carried the ball 44 times in four games for 169 yards losing only one yard. His average is 3.8 yards per try. Charlton leads the Cougar runners with a 10 yard average per attempt with five attempts for 50 yards.
